

PATRICIA SULLIVAN

Patricia unknowingly began doing improv with her siblings growing up in Montana. There was no better way to pass the long, cold winter evenings than performing impromptu skits in the living room. Upon moving to the Bay area to attend Stanford, she found a piece of home and like-minded people in the improv community, who helped her stay in touch with that inner child.

Through the years she's performed and trained with Bay Area improv groups including The Piccalilli Players, Pan Theater, Dragon Theater, Subject to Change, American Improv Theatre, and her husband and two sons in their California living room.

TONY ZAVALA

In the past, Tony has been an improviser and a standup to varying degrees of competency. Now, in the present, he will become a sketch performer before your very eyes. He is delighted to do so with Black Cat Comedy. When not on stage, you can find him riding a bicycle in Santa Cruz.

WILL MARSDEN*

Will is a bad apple. There's one in every group, and the Black Cat Comedy cast is no exception. A renegade from birth, he arose asexually from unholy demon spawn, and by nature eschews all things decent. One can find him wearing crocs with socks, humming Christmas carols year-round, and spewing the cliché "no pun intended" when there was actually no pun delivered. Will's idea of the perfect day involves eating nothing but beans and attending a crowded indoor event.

This cast member has yet to submit any personal info, leaving his biographical fate up to the whim of Alan.*

For information on workshops, classes, and shows:

www.americanimprovtheatre.com

To learn about writing/acting opportunities for future shows:

www.blackcatcomedy.com

AMERICAN IMPROV THEATRE

★ PRESENTS ★

Produced by

ALAN KAATZ

Directed by

CAROLYN JANIS

Sound & Lights by

ETHAN HOEWISCH

Written by

ALAN KAATZ, CAROLYN
JANIS, CODY ROBSON,
COURTNEY MAGLEBY,
ETHAN HOEWISCH, GINGER
WU, JEANNIE CEGLAR,
MATT RASCHER

Spring 2017

Black Cat Licorice Theater

CAST

ANDREW DELEON

This is Andrew's third performance with Black Cat Sketch Comedy and he's excited. When Andrew is this excited, he tends to misuse capital letters, exclamation points, along with excessive use of emoticons which make him seem immature. Andrew is a local entertainer performing stand-up "comedy" (negotiable), these AIT sketch shows, "humorous" (embarrassing) loud banter in public spaces, as well as putting his dogs name into popular songs (We're all just AMII's in the wall). Thank you for your time, enjoy the show, Andrew is innocent.

COURTNEY MAGLEBY

Courtney has been practicing improv over the past few years at San Jose ComedySportz and American Improv Theatre. You'll have to curry favor with her before you're privy to more.

DAVID HALVORSEN*

David stinks of rotting fish, but that does not stop him from venturing into public in search of answers. When he finds something that enchants him, which ranges from a penny on the ground to a cloud in the sky, he claps like a seal.

Fun fact: David never makes eye contact, thinking lasers might shoot out of his eyes and blind you.

ETHAN HOEWISCH

Ethan Hoewisch likes making people laugh and is grateful for this opportunity to help people make other people laugh. Ethan would like to remind you that even though concrete is harder than Jell-O, Jell-O is better to eat than concrete.

GINGER WU

Ginger is a humor enthusiast, future Emmy winner, and wishful thinker. She studied sketch comedy at American Improv Theatre and acting from years of imposter syndrome.

As Wise Zebra #1, Ginger received critical acclaim for the role in Grovecenter Elementary's production of Anansi the Spider. When not acting, Ginger enjoys decaffeinated beverages and long walks at the mall.

JEANNIE CEGLAR

Jeannie found her love of making people laugh when she first learned how to make friends. She grew up watching her favorite sketch shows MADtv and SNL and would imitate Stewart's mom, Doreen, as a fun party joke. Who knew her love for making fun of things would grow into the love for stage comedy! Jeannie has performed improv all over the Bay Area including: Comedysportz, Made Up Theatre, Pear Theatre, and Endgames. Her own improv troupe has performed in many improv festivals including Ventura Improv Festival.

LARA SOPHIA MADHURA

New to the world of sketch and improv, Lara got her first taste of sketch acting in West Valley College's A Sign From God (Dec 2016), and is excited to continue the fun in this season's Black Cat production.

Lara also does art for a living and writes poetry.

MATT RASCHER

Matt, who has played such roles as Harold the Sandwich Artist, Jeff a.k.a. Epic_Ruler69, and Chad Meyers host of CNN's The FACT ZONE!, is incredibly excited to be a part of this wonderful show with a group of amazingly talented people. Matt would like to thank everyone who has helped to make this show happen, those who have helped him along his improv/acting journey, and of course his wonderful wife Valerie and her never-ending patience and support.